A Price to Be Paid

LORD BALFOUR, PRESIDENT of the Congress of British Commonwealth Chambers of Commerce, tells a meeting in Canberra that Europe may be sliding into an ecohomic struggle between two trading blocs, the inner Six and the outer Seven. Not long ago Prime Min-ister Macmillan of Britain, a member of the Outer Seven, expressed the same kind of alarm. The Canadian Government, however, is pub-licly divided on a problem which must vitally affect this nation's Speaking in Parliament a few weeks ago, Mr. Churchill, minister of trade and commerce, said he didnot share the general alarm about the future of our European markets. "Canada." he added, "has goods which western Europe requires and consequently, in the long run I do consequently, in the long run, I do not see that these new trading bloes will be a hindrance to Canada's trade."

On the other hand, Mr. Flemin emphasized in his recent budget speech the danger that one or both of the two blocs might discriminate against Canadian goods. He urged them to grant to all the nations of GATT any tariff reductions that they make among their own members.

It is by no means clear yet that the tariff reductions planned with-in the two groups this year will apply to goods from outside ex-porters like Canada. It is perfect by clear however that if the Free. ly clear, however, that if the Euro-pean nations, individually or collectively, are to reduce their tariffs against the world in general and North America in particular, they will demand some measure of ciprocity

If Canada, for example, is to enjoy easier access to the European markets it will have to grant Europe easier access to ours. That is the real nubbin of the issue now before the Canadian Government but blurred in official speeches, and de-layed until the GATT partners meet for decisive tariff bargaining next autumn. Are Canada and the United

Are Canada and the United States ready to pay the price, in reduced tariffs, for lower tariffs and more trade in Europe?

The United States certainly is ready to pay a partial price at least. Under an act of the Congress President Eisenhower has the power to reduce American tariffs by installments over a period of years, as the European blocs are doing within their own memberships,

The Canadian Government can not alter tariffs without the appro-val of Parliament. Up to now the Diefenbaker Government's general policy has been to increase basic tariffs, as on textiles for instance, and to restrict imports otherwise through quotas on Japanese goods and seasonal tariffs on American farm products.

These are important but peripheral changes. Once the world-wide partnership of GATT meets in September Canada will face wrenching decisions, foreseen by Mr. Fleming in his budget speech.

Through Mr. Pearson the Lib-eral Party has taken a definite stand in favor of a transatiantic free trade area, to be achieved gradually over a reasonable period of read-justment, and including Canada and the United States.

The Dietenbaker Government has shown no interest in this proposal and, up to now, has not indi-cated its policy in the GATT meet-ing. It will have to make up its soon. For if Canada and the United States are to dissuade the European blocs from discriminating against overseas imports, and per-haps fighting between themselves, the tariffs of North America will have to come down. No wonder everybody is worry-ing about the prospects in Europe —except Mr. Churchill.

Tragedy and Violence *

CANADIAN NEWSPAPER-A man, reporting on events in South Africa, was arrested last week in Durban apparently because of news dispatches he had sent back to Canada. The arrest followed shortly after an interview with Albert Luthuli, head of the African National Congress, who was described as "the only sane man I've met since coming here . . ." Canada very rightly issued a sharp rebuke to the South African Government and the newsman was ordered released and deported.

It was Mr. Luthuli who two years ago issued an appeal to white voters in South Africa, saying: "Our poverty has become desperate. Every door through which we might have sought advancement. might have sought advancement culture and a higher civilization has been slammed in our faces. Every means of legitimate national expression and protest is being closed to us. Our leaders and spokesmen are arrested and deported and silenced."

tragically in recent weeks. Now even white residents of South Africa are moved to protest—either Violence is the inevitable result of a policy of apartheid applied in the twentieth century. In charity we must wish Dr. Verwoerd an early recovery from his physical injuries. In conscience we must hope that his long outmoded moral and political concepts will likewise be restored to health.

The Writers Will Talk

STATISTICS ON THE BOOKreading habits of Canadians, re-vealed during National Library Week, were not very flattering. It was shown that while we are bor-rowing more from the libraries than ever before, we are away down the list when it comes to sup-porting book stores by buying books.

It is appropriate that the first announcement of the forthcoming convention of the Canadian Authors' Association should have been made while these facts are still with us. Next July will see authors and associates from all parts of Canada gather here for their deliberations and it might well be that Canadian

R IVALLING THE FAMED GOUzenko case in human interest if not in importance is the defection of the chief cook from the Red Chinese embassy in London.

He has sought refuge under the British flag after six years of virtual imprisonment in Peking's diplomatic household. More imaginative readers will envision the chef—in the tradition of Igor Gouzenko who fled the Soviet embassy in Ottawa-stuffing his pockets with choice recipes and secret sauce mixtures from the embassy vaults and stealing forth in the dead of night to choose freedom. And though his smuggled documents deal with birdsnest soup, egg fooyong and dragon's blood rather than nuclear formulae, rocket diagrams or missile sites, still his escape is no less the protest of a human being against repression and loss of dignity; no less a blow for freedom and the right to brown a eatlet or bring a sauce to the boil to individual, rather than collective; Well, One Thing, Our Problem Is Obvious'

Make It Rhyme for a Dime

A GOOD deal of the need for literacy A as an educational goal seems to disappear with the news from the Greeting Card Asso-ciation of the United States that an estimated five and a quarter billion greeting cars were sold in that country last year. No doubt Canida can provide a comparable figure.

That is an awful lot of cards, each one of which, says the Tobia Greeting Card Association, provides the public "with emotional outlets and a sense of social well-being attainable by no other means."

Presumably "other means" might include writing a note to a sick friend to hope he will get well, writing a short letter to someone to wish him a merry Christmas, visiting a friend for a few minutes that the compliment him on a minutes' chat to compliment him on a promotion, phoning a young couple in another city to share their happiness in a new baby . . and so on and on through every possible reason for human communication.

And make no mistake, the greeting card industry caters for just about every occasion the mind can imagine. How else would you use up five and a His words have been borne out quarter billion cards?

Lost Ability

Africa are moved to protest—cither passively, as the "shabbily dressed woman" who was reported passing out pound notes to needy African natives; or violently, as in the case of the white citizen who attempted to assassinate Prime Minister Verteam of the experts who compose greeting card Why the "other means" cannot pro-vide the emotional outlets and social well-being achieved by addressing and the experts who compose greeting card

That self-expression is not possible for everyone is obvious. Some of the verses you find in Christmas or Easter cards, for instance, could only have been produced by people dedicated to such work. Less literate people could not attain such summits of prosody, more literate people would not care to.

But now that so many men, women and children depend on greeting cards to express their thoughts to their fellows, is there not a possibility that the greeting card writers will take over entirely and the "other means" will completely disappear?

and it might well be that Canadian bookishness or non-bookishness will be up for consideration. The man or woman behind the pen or type-writer has a personal interest in the state of literacy of the Canadian public and it will be interesting to get an expert viewpoint on this matter.

The authors in any case will be made very welcome here. A community so proud of its beauty will be happy to have within it a visiting group so able to do it descriptive justice.

Now that printed card communication has overflowed the original field of holiday greetings and spread into face for holiday greetings and spread into area formerly the exclusive preserve of the letter, the postcard, the telegram and the telephone call, will it not go farther? Surely the makers of five and a quarter billion cards a year will not stop until cards tell the story in a hundred other ways.

In an earlier era, when you wanted to send a message to someone, you sat down at a desk and wrote it out. Now you merely step to a card tack in a store and select a card that says what you want to say.

you want to say.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"MAY SE I NEVER REALLY PUNCHED ANY CATTLE, BUT I STUCK OUT MY TONGUE AT THE MILKMAN ONCE!"

You don't need to be able to write, you don't need to be able to punctuate, and you don't have to be able to rhyme. It's all done for you.

Such convenience is bound to spread particularly when an increasing number of us forsake the pen and desk not because writing is too much bother but because we just can't put our thoughts on paper any more. We'll lose the ability not only to compose a sentence expressing our thoughts but also the ability to write it down.

More to Come

The day of the card will then be at its peak and sales of five and a quarter billion will seem, in retrospect, ridiculously small.

Just to anticipate a little, here are a few examples which no doubt will be seen in the card racks soon:

To your coal dealer: Sorry my answer is so late, I'm really on the run.
Enclosed find cheque for coal to date
—And send another ton.

To the municipal assessor:
You've doubled taxes on my lot,
You might as well confess it. I will not come and pay the shot. Until you reassess it.

To the plumber: The pipe you fixed last week still I tell you so with feeling;

The watermark on the upstairs floor is now on the downstairs celling.

To the provincial government:
Thank you for the tax rebate
It's like getting something free,
But I know where the dough comes So send YOUR thanks to ME.

To the card manufacturer: You made it so easy to brush off my friends

Triends
With a ready-made card so neat,
That now I no longer buy your cards
For Pve no friends left to greet.

Two of the most sensational discoveries this century were more or less accidental—Sir Alexander Fleming's discovery of penicillin, which has revolutionized medicine; and Professor Hahn's discovery of nuclear fission, which has led to the atomic bomb and the atomic power station. Neither of these men was trying to achieve anything practical—they were just trying to find out how nature works.

Dangerous German Spirit

ONDON - When Mr. Macmillan was London - When Mr. Alexander the in Washington, his most flery remarks were not apparently about the H-bomb.

H-bomb.

Some leaked reports to American newspapers have suggested that he spoke very sharply indeed to President Elsenhower about America's present attitude of favoring the six-nation "European Common Market" led by Germany and France, and distavoring the seven-nation "European Free Trade Association" led by Britain and the Scandinavian countries.

Many Topics

The reports said that Mr. Macmillan ranged widely over the danger that an economic split in Europe might lead eventually to a political split there; over his fears about some of the German leaders who may come to the fore in succession to Konrad Adenauer; over the concept of the balance of power in Europe; and so forth.

Mr. Macmillan has stoce decided that

Mr. Macmillan has since denied that he said all the things he was reported to have said, but there should be no surto have said, but there should be to said prise that he did say some of them. Various things have been happening to the European Common Market recently which the American administration does not seem to have begun to understand.

There is no doubt that Mr. Ademauer's main reason for wishing to create the Common Market sprang from his laudable desire to integrate Germany into a broader and peaceful European framework, by means of this close economic alliance between Germany.

France, Italy, Belgium, Holland, and Luveenburg.

Prance, Italy, Belgium, Holland Son-Luxembourg.

The German Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard, who feven more than Mr. Adenauer) is the British Government's favorite German politician just now, originally favored the Common Market because it appeared to fit in with his freet trading ideas; he has personally always wanted to work out some system whereby Britain and other non-Common Market countries could be associated with the enterprise.

Hallstein Scheme

But recently things have not been going Mr. Erhard's way. Planning power within the Common Market has fallen largely into the hands of Mr. Adenauer's confidant, Professor Walter Hallstein and he is a very different kettle of fish. kettle of fish.

Prof. Hallstein had devised a scheme for "speeding up" the original program for the establishment of the Common

Under the new Hallstein proposals, the six countries will start cutting their the six countries win start cutting during the tariffs on the between each other quite sharply from next July; they will also start to move towards their "common tariff" which they will impose on imports from the outside world.

It has become gradually clearer that the common tariff. German tariff.

in this common tariff, German tariff rates on imports from Britain and other countries will go up quite considerably.

It is true that French and Italian It is true that French and Italian tariffs on imports from Britain will come down under this common tariff, but their tariffs on competing imports from Germany will drop even more sharply 'eventually to disappearing'. So British exports are likely to suffer

Britain's policy stand has always been that it cannot join the full Common Market, involving the obligation to impose a common (and aften higher) tariff on impose from outside Europe, because of its obligations about imperial preference under Commonwealth trade

Six other European countries, in-cluding the Scandinavians and the Swiss, have had equal reservations and they have joined Britain in the seven-nation trade organization EFTA.

Main Barrier

Even after Britain's original idea of a full 13-nation European Free Trade Area was refused, Britain felt that Mr. Erhard was working hand to help secure some accord. Up to a short while ago, the main barrier in the way seemed to be certain French protectionist fears, which were illogical and could be whittled down in time.

tled down in time.

But now, fairly suddenly, Britain has begun to realize that the main barrier is no longer economic illogicality in France: it is a new and potentially dangerous political spirit in certain quarters in Germany. There are definite signs that some Germans of the Hallstein school of thought are rager to block any trade rapprochement between the Seven and the Six, because they want to keep British trading and political influence out of continental Europe; they believe that if Britain can be kept out, the figurese that will eventually become fluence that will eventually become dominant in this integrated commo market is that of Germany.

And when Mr. Adenauer dies, they are increasingly hopeful that the rulers of Germany will be theniselves. There is an element of ti in the Hallstein trade policy.* But this dangerous new spirit in some quarters in Germany is not all Britain's fault; and it is important that it should not be accounted to grow the spirit of the second spirit in the se

American Encouragement

Unfortunately some American State Department officials have been encour-aging it by default. Some of them, at times even including Mr. Dillon, have been saying recently that while the six-nation Common Market is a worthy and liberal political ideal, the seven-nation EFTA to which Britain belongs is merely a discriminatory trading block.

Economically and factually, this is claptrap; and any commentator who knows anything about Europe can see quite well which Germans have been leading American officials up the garden path when they talk nonsense of this sort.

History's Judgment

Nikita Khrushchev, touring through France, used every chance to attack the German chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, calling recent history to witness to support his abusive statements, seemingly oblivious that history is all against Khrushchey's record and strongly in favor of Adenauer. For it was Ade-nauer who defied Hitler's orders and paid the penalty for it whilst Khruschev in obedience to Stalin's wishes liquidated millions of Ukrainian farmers but waited prudently until Stalin was dead to abuse his memory in that notorious three-hour-long, tear-jerking speech before the Supreme Soviets.

The Times was a little behind the times with its headline of March 28 which said "Crime Syndicates Driving to Control U.S. Economy."

A crime syndicate has been in con-ol all the time, as in all countries with its legal system geared for robbing the workers of their unpaid labor.

Perhaps what the U.S. authorities fear is the type of usurpation that is not concealed in the productive process.

For I've seen them often and just to be mean, I want to describe a pair under the names of Isabel and Kaye.

Recently it's a lovely a pair under the names of Isabel and Kaye.

Because it's a lovely, April day, they've gone for a ride in Isabel's little car. They drive slowly and sedately as befits women who are well up in their fifties. ("No, it's not too slow for me, Isabel. The country's so lovely now with all the flowers. I like to go slowly and enjoy them")

They drive slowly past the line of Balm of Gilead trees, past the field where the of thead trees, past the field where the daffodi, pickers are working down the rows, and then, suddenly, Kaye gives an excited little scream because she's seen some lilies growing on the road allowance and up an unfenced grassy bank. So with a fine display of plumpish leg, Kaye hoists herself out of the car, and Mird you, Isabel and Keye mean no harm.

As Isabel says, "I can remember how, back in the Old Country when they have in the Old Country when I was a girl, we used to go into the woods and pick every bluebell we could carry."

It's lack of imagination and lack of knowledge, really, and perhaps a lack of consideration.

They just don't think about the other people who will be driving by, and who might also like to see Easter liles growing wild beside the road.

They don't realize that it's people like themselves who make the protection of wild flowers necessary.

They have no idea of simply looking and treasuring up the sight in their minds so that the lilies, like Wordsworth's daffodils, might "flash upon that inward eye which is the bliss of solitude."

No, they must have the actual physical flowers and plenty of them, though crammed in a vase like that the lilies can barely breathe and no one can see their individual grace.

Luckily, the Easter lilies are protected in our parks. Luckily, too, there are still plenty of people who cherish the lilies on their private property.

Such people know that Easter lilies take almost seven years to develop from seed to flowering stage. They know that each lily picked means the loss of a whole capsule of seeds. They know that they will kill the bulbs if they pick the leaves or take a stem so long that the white lower part is still attached.

I'm sorry for Isabel and Kaye, but it would be so much better for us all if they could learn to look instead of pick.

LONDON How "temporary" can a house be? During the war and just after it, 124,455 asbestos-board "prefabs" were put up in Britain under the Temporary Housing Act., Today, 15 years after the war finished, 112,000 of them are still in use.

And with big waiting lists for housing through-out the country, it will be some time yet before the tenants are out of them and into bricks and mortar. Local councils are Beyburn empowered to continue the use of the prefabs for at least another

But it seems that "temporary" has always been a flexible word when it comes to housing. In London's Woolwich there are three temporary wooden huts inhabited by old-age pensioners. They were put up as temporary homes for munition workers at Woolwich Arsenal—in 1915! while the House of Commons awars a statement from Prime Minister Macmillan on the practice of making state documents available for the writing of memoirs, the memoirs that have caused the Parliamentary hubbub (Sir Anthony Eden's) are doing hourishing business

In the good old days, when acquiring a sun tan in the suntimer was one of my dearest ambitions, one had to work for one's sun tan.

In my case, it was: burn, peel, tan; burn again, peel again, tan again; repeat at intervals all summer long.

In short, in those days, one earned one's sun tan.

In later years, sun tan lotions were invented, and when these were spread on the skin, they eliminated the burn and peel portions of the sun tan process.

This took some of the challenge out of it, but was still acceptable even to sun tan purists such as myself.

And then there was the matter of the winter sun tan.

The winter sun tan was a mark of afluence, for it was available only to the man with enough money to take a winter vacation, either in the sunny south or on the equally sunny ski-slopes.

But along came the sun-lamp, which, combined with sun tan lotions, produced a check of tan without the necessity of moving from the living room.

And, of course, the sunlamp removed the aristocracy of the winter suntan.

Now even this has been outdone by the manufac-turers who are producing a sun tan in a bottle.

Children Enjoy Drinking From These Novelty Mugs By PENNY SAVER

Mothers of young children are going to appreciate novel drinking mugs that are newest arrivals in one downtown store. Any woman who has had to face problem of making sure youngsters drink enough milk has probably used persuasive figures, such as coloring milk or providing drinking strategy.

New mugs would be intriguing to any child. Curved handle which rises from mug's base is owner's built-in straw. Milk will disappear in next to no time! In colorful plastic, mugs come in red, blue or pink with half section of mug in clear plastic. On this side measurements and peppy comments spur-drinker on to greater efforts. Mugs stand about five inches high and sell for 69 cents.

It's stimulating to drive home from the office and pass youngsters laughing and playing in warm spring sunshine. No matter how many public parks and beaches a city has children still love to play in each other's gardens. One way to make play time more attractive and to channel children's energy is to provide them with a miniature hadminton court of their own.

Radminton sets that are on sale this week will provide many hours of fun for your children and their friends. Sets contain two strong racquets, bird and net. There's a booklet of rules for beginners. Complete set will only cost you $2.95.

Household towels will soon be taking a terrific beating

Household towels will soon be taking a terrific beating as children start "borrowing" them to take to the beach. Be ready with striped beach towels that can be kept for this purpose. Towels are in multi-colored stripes, measure 30 inches by 60 inches, and are low priced at $1.69.

"Other towels I've seen in colorful checks will take many hours of grubby beach fun before showing signs of dirt! Color range includes orange, yellow, dark green, turquoise, and buff. Beach size towels are priced at $1.35, hand towels come at 75 cents and face cloths can be had for 25 cents. Just the kine that a mother of small boys would appreciate! ### FROM THE TUDOR ROSE with

Mrs. McTuggley forwards a word on water-sport.

"With the swimming season coming on the begins!, it is important that we are all aware of the new strokes. Things are not as they were when I was a girl. In those days, all one did was sort of splash around in the water. Now, one must be able to perform several violent manouvres in order to be accepted on the beaches. For those who have not kept up on the new strokes, I will outline two of them here, The first, and probably least popular, is the Nuclear Swish. This is quite a simple thing really. It involves remaining submerged for several hours, with your body in such a position as to resemble a submarine. Then, when everyone has forgotten you, you come thrashing to the surface, and throw rocks at your friends on the beach. The second is the Three Stage Flop Kick. For this one, stand in about four inches of water and make motions as though you were about to rise into the air. When everyone be this to stare at you simply flop, abdornen first, into the firs to stare at you simply, flop, abdornen first, into the water and lie there with a silly grin. Neither of these new strokes will get you yery far, but then what will these days."

Thank you Mrs. McTug-gley. Here is something for swimmers and non-swim-mers alike.

In the good old days, when acquiring a sun tan in the summer was one of my dearest ambitions, one had to work for one's sun tan.

In my case, it was: burn, peel, tan; burn again, peel again, tan again; repeat at intervals all summer long.

In short in these days, one earned one's sun tan.

In short, in those days, one earned one's sun tan.

In later years, sun tan lotions were invented, and when these were spread on the skin, they eliminated the burn and peel portions of the sun tan process.

This took some of the challenge out of it, but was still acceptable even to sun tan purists such as myself.

And then there was the matter of the winter sun tan. The winter sun tan was a mark of afluence, for it was available only to the man withenough money to take a winter vacation, either in the sunny south or on the equally sunny ski-slopes.

But along came the sun-lamp, which, combined with sun tan lotions, produced a cheek of tan without the necessity of moving from the living room.

And, of course, the sun-lamp removed the aristocracy of the winter suntan.
